FRIST EDIT TO DEBBIE DURING HURRICANE

My Princess, even though I know the distance and the troubles we're facing have been heavy on our hearts. I can't help but sense that you're losing hope in us, and it worries me more than I can express. I feel like the weight of our situation is starting to take its toll on you, and it breaks my heart.

I want you to know that I understand how hard this is for both of us. But please, don't blame yourself for anything. I'm scared, too, scared of what the future holds and scared that my current situation is pushing us apart. I know it may feel like I'm asking too much, but I need you to trust in me and in what we've built together. I believe our future is still bright, but we must both be willing to make sacrifices for it.

You are the person I love, and I hope you can find it in your heart to believe that I'm fighting every day for us. I truly want to overcome these obstacles, but I need your faith and support. I need you to trust that I will come through for us and that we can create the life we've always dreamed of. I need you to open your heart, even if it feels scary right now.

And as for the hurricane, I can't help but feel worried. The thought of you facing this storm without me by your side is unbearable. I want nothing more than to protect you and keep you safe, but I can't be there physically right now. That's why I want you to find a way to get to safety, to remove yourself from its path. You need to be safe and secure, especially during this frightening time.

Also, Baby, remember that my love for you is unwavering, even through these challenging moments. I believe in us, and I hope you can find it in your heart to trust me, to trust our love, and to believe that we can conquer this together.

I love you infinitely.
